

Side Saddle Stitch

Side Saddle Stitch

The Side Saddle Stitch is a wonderfully textured crochet stitch that creates a slightly diagonal, woven effect. It's made by combining groups of double crochets and single crochets in a repeating pattern that "leans" across the fabric, giving it its saddle-like appearance.

This stitch has excellent structure and works well for blankets, dishcloths, and scarves. The combination of height and compactness makes it both decorative and durable.

Beginner's Guide to the Side Saddle Stitch in Crochet

The Side Saddle Stitch is a textured crochet stitch that produces a beautiful, subtle ridge pattern, resembling a row of tiny saddles across your fabric. It's a versatile stitch that adds interest and depth to any project, yet it's simple enough for beginners to learn.

This stitch works well for blankets, scarves, cushion covers, and afghans, giving a clean, structured look while maintaining softness. Its unique texture is ideal for creating visual interest in both single-color and multi-color projects.

Understanding the Side Saddle Stitch

The Side Saddle Stitch is worked by combining single crochets (SC) and double crochets (DC) in a staggered pattern. The alternating height of stitches creates a subtle ridge that runs horizontally across the fabric. This texture is similar to the look of a "saddle," hence the name.

It's a stitch that's forgiving for beginners because it repeats a predictable rhythm, allowing you to focus on tension and stitch consistency while creating an eye-catching texture.
